The increase of $1,512,200 in deposits and $3,510,500 in legal tenders reflects the interior movement, and the expansion of $4,647,900 in loans, if not made up largely of stock-exchange transactions, is an encouraging sign of the revival in business. One year ago the banks were carrying an excess reserve of $16,515,515, and loans were $14,000,000 less. Two years since the banks were lasuing clearing-house certificates, and while the abbreviated statement then issued weekly showed an apparent surplus reserve of $3,000,000, it is known that many banks were then below the limit required by them. Since then the New York banks have practically absorbed three heavy bond issues, and still they have $10,000,000 surplus money to loan.
